FAST FACTS & ESSENTIALS

Everything you need to know before you go

Location

On Mexico's Gulf coast, in the Yucatán Peninsula - a walled colonial port and UNESCO World Heritage site.

Language

Spanish is official; English widely understood in tourist areas. Some towns still speak Maya.

Internet

Reliable 4G and fibre in town; patchy coverage on rural routes. WiFi in most hotels / hostels.

Transportation

Reachable by road or air. City centre walkable; taxis and colectivos common.

Climate

Tropical year-round. Best months: November-April for dry, breezy days.

Currency

Mexican Peso (MXN)
Cards accepted in cities; carry cash for markets.

Electricity

110v, same plugs as US.
Surge protectors advised in rainy season.

Etiquette

Campeche is calm and friendly; greet locals, respect heritage walls, and mind the midday sun.

Campeche is a city wrapped in quiet color — sunlight on coral walls, calm tides against ancient bastions, voices echoing through cobbled streets. This guide invites you to wander slowly, to taste, listen, and connect. Each page blends history, people, and place, linking you to hidden corners and local hearts. Whether read on a screen or in your hands, it's a companion made for discovery.

The Walls

The city's soul lives within its walls — coral stone, pastel paint, and centuries of endurance. Built to shield from pirates and storms, they now embrace rather than defend. Climb the bastions where guards once stood and watch the city's rhythm unfold: guitars near the gates, market scents drifting through arches, the laughter of children bouncing between stones. These walls hold not isolation, but continuity — proof that protection can evolve into belonging, and history can become home.

THE STRENGTH THAT REMAINS BECOMES WELCOME.

The Sea

HERE, THE HORIZON FEELS CLOSE ENOUGH TO BREATHE.

Beyond the ramparts, the Gulf stretches wide and forgiving. As the air cools, the city flows toward it — couples strolling, cyclists gliding, fishermen mending their nets in the amber light. The malecón hums with quiet joy, its breeze carrying the mingled scents of salt and roasted corn. The sea is Campeche's mirror and memory: calm, reflective, infinite. Every evening, it gathers the day's stories and returns them softened, gilded, and free.

The Story

Campeche's story is layered, patient, and very much alive. Beneath the colonial facades lie Mayan foundations; above them, new generations write their own verses in paint, song, and laughter. Step into a market and hear it — the barter, the greetings, the rhythm of belonging. The city teaches that heritage isn't stillness, but motion: hands crafting, voices remembering, time looping gracefully. To walk its streets is to read a living manuscript, one written by many hands but told with one enduring warmth.

THE PAST SPEAKS KINDLY TO THOSE WHO LISTEN.

The Light

Even the shadows here glow softly.

When the heat softens and the cathedral begins to glow, Campeche exhales. The streets stir with laughter, the scent of anafres drifts from corners, and families wander the malecón beneath the fading sky. The city changes pace — no rush, just a shared rhythm, easy and familiar. This is Campeche at its best: alive but unhurried, steeped in color, history, and warmth. As night gathers, every light feels like an invitation to stay a little longer.

"Campeche comes alive when the sun learns to rest."

Night & Day
LANDMARKS AND ATTRACTIONS

The places you just HAVE to see....

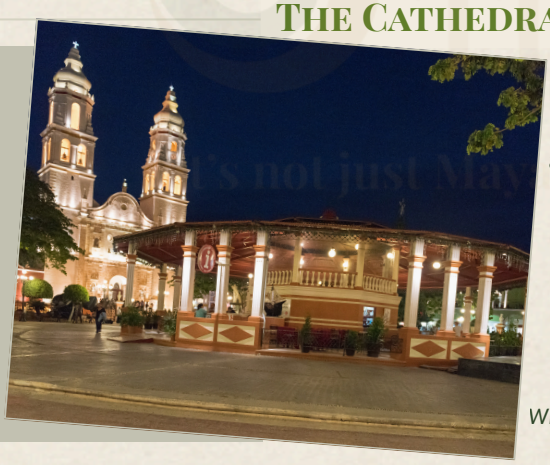
Fuerte de San Miguel

Begin where the horizon feels endless. The bastion's golden stone glows under morning light, its galleries filled with Mayan relics and sea air. From its ramparts, the city unfolds — walls, domes, and the calm shimmer of the coast. It's history with a view, and a gentle way to meet Campeche's past before the heat rises.

Campeche's most striking fortress, standing high above the Gulf.

The Cathedral & Plaza Principal

When lights bloom across the plaza, Campeche turns communal. Families stroll, musicians tune, and the cathedral's towers glow in amber and white. Sit with an ice cream or a tamarind drink, listen to the hum of evening life, and feel the balance of reverence and joy that defines the city after sunset.



Where the city gathers as dusk becomes night.

EL MALECÓN

By late morning, the malecón is pure rhythm — joggers tracing the water's edge, fishermen preparing boats, and the Gulf stretching like liquid glass. It's both boundary and invitation: the best place to feel how Campeche balances motion and stillness, where the sea becomes part of daily ritual.

Morning calm and endless sea.

FUENTES MARINAS, WATERFRONT LIGHT SHOW

Where the sea learns to dance.

As night falls along the malecón, water and light take the stage. The Fuentes Marinas fountains rise and sway to music, each jet catching the glow of passing cars and the laughter of families gathered to watch. Children run close enough to feel the mist; couples pause mid-walk as colors shift from gold to indigo. It's simple, local, and completely unpretentious — a reminder that beauty doesn't always hide in temples or galleries. Sometimes it arcs into the sky, fades, and returns again, just for the joy of being seen.

Our Hidden Gem

CASA MAYIS, HOLISTIC THERAPY ROOM

Quiet intention behind an unmarked door.

Along a busy avenue near the airport, a plain façade hides something rare. Step through the unmarked doorway and the city falls away. Inside, Casa Mayis feels private and purposeful—part home, part sanctuary. Ceremonial cacao, intuitive massage, and guided meditation are offered without schedule or signage, only by those who listen for calm. Every ritual is personal, shaped to restore balance rather than impress. It's the kind of place that finds you when you're ready: still, warm, and deeply human.

THE Taste OF CAMPECHE

Flavors that tell the city's story.

Campeche's cuisine is built on calm seas, old kitchens, and a patient kind of magic. Every dish carries a trace of the coast, a whisper of spice, and the warmth of shared tables. To taste here is to understand how history, land, and sea have shaped one another.

MUST-TRY!

PAN DE CAZÓN

Tortillas stacked with black beans and shark in tomato-chile sauce — the soul of Campeche on a plate.

LECHÓN HORNEADO

Achiote-marinated pork slow-roasted until tender, served with handmade tortillas.

RELLENO NEGRO

Dark turkey stew scented with burnt chiles and spice — a feast of smoke and ceremony.

CAMARONES AL COCO

Coconut-crusted shrimp brightened with lime; a bite of the shoreline at dusk.

PANUCHOS

Fried corn rounds stuffed with beans, topped with turkey, avocado, and sharp onion.

MARQUESITAS

Crisp wafers rolled with melted cheese and cajeta — the flavor of evening laughter.

PLAN Your JOURNEY

This path is yours to draw.

Journaling keeps a journey alive. Writing slows experience to the pace of awareness — helping memory settle, meaning surface, and curiosity expand. Each note you make becomes a breadcrumb for your future self, or for someone yet to arrive.

The Maya world has no single route. Every traveler moves differently — guided by rhythm, curiosity, or chance. This guide offers pieces of a mosaic, not a map to follow. Where you go, what you find, and how you connect become part of a story that others will one day read. In Maya Tuya, the Maya is yours — and your journey shapes the next.

PLAN IN YOUR OWN RHYTHM

There's no template for travel, only inspiration. Just as your route is yours to create, so is the way you prepare for it. We don't dictate how you plan — we simply offer a few sparks to help you think clearly, travel confidently, and tread lightly. Use whichever prompts speak to you, and write them out in the blank pages that follow.

Suggested Prompts...

- What draws me most to Campeche?
- What kind of traveler am I today?
- Which moments make me feel most alive when I travel?
- What will I give back to the places I visit?
- How do I balance adventure with rest?
- Who might I become through this journey?

Join the circle. Share highlights, reflections, or hidden gems from your route at mayatuya.com— your experiences guide the next traveler.

AFTER THE Journey

For the moments after movement.

Travel doesn't end when you unpack. The real journey unfolds in the quiet that follows — in the memories that surface, the insights that settle, and the questions that remain. Writing helps those fragments find form, turning experience into understanding.

Each traveler leaves traces for the next. Your reflections, stories, and lessons become the compass for future explorers — a living circle of shared journeys that keeps the Maya world alive through connection.

PAUSE, REMEMBER, AND WRITE.

Use the space on the following pages to record what stayed with you — the small details, the surprises, the shifts in perspective. There are no wrong answers, only reminders of where you've been and who you became along the way.

Suggested Prompts:

– A moment that changed how I see Campeche
– Something I learned about myself while traveling
– One kindness I'll remember
– What I'll carry into my next journey
– The word that best describes how I feel returning home
– Where I want to go next
